Early Life and Training:

Makovsky was born on June 20, 1839, in Moscow, Russia, into a family of artists. His father, Yegor Makovsky, was a respected painter who provided his son with early training in art. Makovsky later studied at the Imperial Academy of Arts in St. Petersburg, where he excelled as a colorist and draftsman.

Artistic Style and Techniques:

Makovsky's artistic style was rooted in realism, but he often infused his paintings with elements of romanticism and historical narrative. His use of color was particularly striking, employing a vivid palette and bold brushstrokes to create a sense of grandeur and opulence.

Makovsky was a master of portraiture, capturing the likenesses of his subjects with remarkable accuracy while also revealing their inner emotions and personalities. His portraits are renowned for their exquisite details, from the textures of fabrics to the expressions on faces.

Major Works:

- "The Crowning of Nicholas II" (1896): A monumental painting depicting the coronation of the last Tsar of Russia.
- "The Boyar Wedding Feast" (1883): A vibrant and opulent portrayal of a traditional Russian wedding celebration.
- "The Death of Ivan the Terrible" (1888): A dramatic scene capturing the final moments of the legendary Russian ruler.
- "Samson and Delilah" (1892): A biblical narrative with a stunning use of chiaroscuro lighting.
- "The Fortune Teller" (1887): A captivating portrait of a mysterious woman surrounded by symbols of divination.

Legacy and Influence:

Konstantin Makovsky's legacy lives on as one of the most acclaimed Russian painters of the 19th century. His works have been exhibited in major museums around the world and have inspired generations of artists. His influence can be seen in the works of later Russian painters, such as Valentin Serov and Ilya Repin.
