1. The Ghost of Cecil Hotel

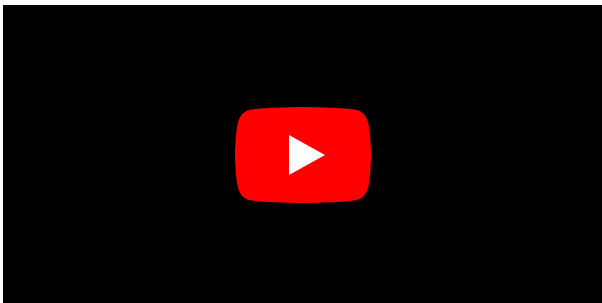

In 2013, a young woman named Elisa Lam was found dead in the water tank of the Cecil Hotel in Los Angeles. Her death was ruled accidental, but the circumstances surrounding her death were mysterious and have led to speculation that she may have been murdered or that her death was the result of paranormal activity.

In the months leading up to her death, Lam had been behaving strangely. She was seen talking to herself and acting erratically. She also posted a series of strange videos on YouTube, in which she appeared to be distressed and paranoid.

On the day of her death, Lam was seen on the hotel's security footage entering the elevator and behaving strangely. She appears to be pressing buttons randomly and talking to herself. The elevator doors then open, but Lam does not exit. Instead, she continues to behave strangely and eventually disappears from view.

Lam's body was found two weeks later in the hotel's water tank. Her death was ruled accidental, but many people believe that she was murdered or that her death was the result of paranormal activity.

The Cecil Hotel has a long history of violence and death. Over the years, there have been numerous murders and suicides at the hotel. Some people believe that the hotel is haunted by the ghosts of those who have died there.

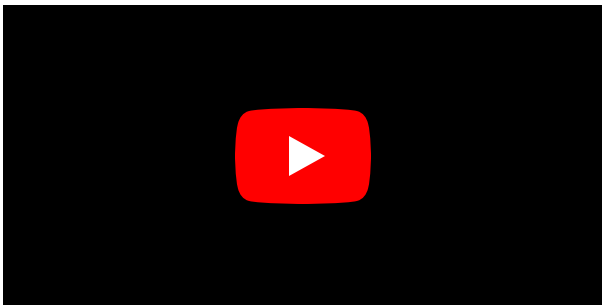

2. The Enfield Poltergeist

In 1977, a series of strange events began to occur in a house in Enfield, England. The Hodgson family, who lived in the house, reported that they were being terrorized by a poltergeist.

The poltergeist activity included objects moving on their own, voices being heard, and objects being thrown. The Hodgson family also reported seeing a ghost in the house.

The Enfield Poltergeist is one of the most well-documented cases of poltergeist activity in history. The case was investigated by the Society for Psychical Research, which concluded that the activity was genuine.

The Enfield Poltergeist case has been featured in numerous books and television documentaries. It is one of the most famous cases of poltergeist activity in the world.

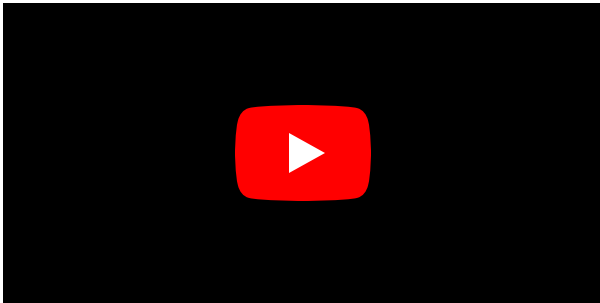

3. The Amityville Horror

In 1975, the Lutz family moved into a house in Amityville, New York. The house had been the site of a mass murder a year earlier, in which Ronald DeFeo Jr. killed his parents and four siblings.

The Lutz family soon began to experience strange events in the house. They reported hearing strange noises, seeing ghosts, and being attacked by unseen forces.

The Lutz family eventually fled the house after only 28 days. They claimed that the house was haunted by the ghosts of the DeFeo family.

The Amityville Horror is one of the most famous haunted house stories in the world. It has been the subject of numerous books and films.

These are just a few of the most spooky things ever caught on camera. These videos provide a glimpse into the unknown and leave us wondering what is really out there.

Whether you believe in ghosts, poltergeists, or other paranormal phenomena, these videos are sure to give you a thrill. So, if you're looking for a good scare, be sure to check out these spooky videos.
